QUALIFICATIONS OF SPECIAL EDUCATION TEST ADMINISTRATORS

To plan effectively for students, relevant, reliable data are necessary. To ensure that the information used to plan for students with special needs students is of high quality the following qualifications are required of personnel administering tests in the District.

Educational and psychological tests are categorized according to the levels of training required of the test administrators.

Level A: Tests which can be adequately administered, scored and interpreted with the aid of a manual and a general orientation to the kind of organization in which one is working.

Examples: Informal screening tests, classroom check lists, etc.
Vocational and trade proficiency tests.

Level B: Tests which require some technical knowledge of test construction and subjects such as statistics, individual differences, the psychology of adjustment, personnel psychology, and guidance.

Examples: Educational achievement tests
Group intelligence tests
Special Aptitude tests
Interest inventories
Personality screening inventories

Training standards: Completion of an advanced level course in testing in a university, or training under the direction of a qualified supervisor or consultant.

Level C: Tests which require substantial understanding of testing and supporting psychological topics, together with supervised experience in the use of these devices.

Examples: Clinical tests of intelligence
Personality tests
Clinical diagnostic tests

Training standards: Such tests are to be used only by persons who are trained as school psychologists and members of BCSPA.

Summary

Level A and B tests are those typically administered by classroom and/or learning assistance teachers. These people are to be aware of the principles of standardized administration.

Level C tests are only to be administered by those who have completed graduate courses specifically designed to ensure competency in the administration and interpretation of these tests in the total assessment process. This would typically include those holding graduate degrees in school psychology. Level C tests are restricted and are to be controlled by those qualified to use them.

These qualifications are designed to avoid serious misuse and distortion in interpretation which may occur when people who are not properly trained are responsible for decisions about individuals or policies that are based on test results.

Assessments obtained outside the District

Assessments obtained outside the District are to come from recognized assessment centres (e.g. Children's Hospital, Autism Assessment Network, U.B.C., etc.) or from registered members of the B.C. Psychological Association.
